This was good teaching, I liked how Dr. Kevin Zadai explained that the word “Shalom” means "let God's kingdom be with you." I like that. And how we (followers of Jesus) should be constantly correcting things, and guarding our borders.

I also like what he said about dealing with people who break agreements with you. I think one of the main causes of people who can't keep their word, is the fact that they are individuals who are lacking in character and integrity. These kinds of people seem to go from one Christian Ministry to the next, causing discord and confusion wherever they go; and when they eventually get kicked out of a ministry, they have a narcissistic attitude that projects guilt and shame on you for their mistakes. So what Kevin said about creating distance between you and them is a very good personal code of conduct.

He made some good points about people going their own way, and when they do, we need to go back to God and take the matter up with Him, so that others don't pull us down, or try to get us going in the wrong direction—out of God's will. Consideration of one's relationship with God should be seen as of the utmost importance.

In addition, the teaching that covered the topic about praying the scriptures out loud was great, and how the angels have to respond to it because we're speaking out the covenant when we do.

From now on, I see the need to have to put my foot down, and be tenacious about enforcing the covenant. Because of all the manipulation that is in the modern church.
