I liked the statement made about reading God's Word, and how it's like taking your medicine. And how the scriptures are there to help you in life.

Psalm chapter #91 seemed to be the center of these lessons, and that makes me very happy. It just so happens to be one of my favorite Psalms. Therefore I'm very grateful that it was brought up in the lessons. By the grace of God, I was able to memorize all sixteen verses in the past, and to this day, I still remember them by heart.

However, when it comes to staying in the secret place of The Most High? Around the year of 2020, I had unfortunately allowed the human hearts of doubt and unbelief to violate my boundaries back then, before I let my guard down which caused me to catch COVID-19 later that year.

I wish I had been more vicious against doubt and unbelief back then, because it was a time in my life when I was ignorant, thinking that unbelieving Christians around me would eventually hold themselves accountable, and believe in God for healing miracles during a crisis, but they didn't, and it almost killed me. Because their branches of doubt-in-God smothered me and subtracted from my faith in a time that I needed miracles the most. Therefore I choose to stay in the dwelling place of The Most High from now on and let God judge anyone who tries to drag me out of it.

Nowadays I separate myself from people who operate in doubt and unbelief, and I currently operate with a spiritual restraining order against doubt and unbelief, because I'm not going to be judged with them and their deception ever again.

Aside from this, there were a lot of good teachings within the confounds of the five lessons. They hit the nail on the head and got straight to the point. Because I've seen the same thing within the confounds of my church. An organization that I started going to several years ago, but as the years went by, I, unfortunately, realized that the church was not walking in the fear of the Lord, nor did they teach the importance of repentance.
